HOW TO COACH LITTLE KIDS

4.1.

Soccer drills should be fun. Remember, kids finish some exercises quickly and immediately want to do something else. That is why you must have some additional exercises ready in case the drill you have chosen is not working well or takes too little time. For example, you can organise a race with a ball.

4.2.

Don't train kids as a team from the very beginning; that comes later. Your job is to make sure that each of the kids learns how to use the ball well before they start playing matches. The idea is to develop their unique talents. Then you can start to form teams.

4.3.

Demonstrate to the kids how they can control the ball. Perform some juggling or other tricks with the ball and let them see how you do it. Just watch their faces when they see you engaged in these activities! They'll want to be like you. Tell them that they just have to practise a lot.

4.4.

Remember that kids are very competitive at that age. Some of them may try to win at all costs. That is why it is important to repeat constantly that cheating is wrong. Tell them that during the game only their abilities and hard work count. Dishonest methods are not a way to win.

Przeczytaj trzy teksty związane z pracą. Z podanych odpowiedzi wybierz właściwą, zgodną z treścią tekstu. Zakreśl literę A, B albo C.

Tekst 1.

The first day at a new workplace is always difficult, especially if you didn't have to keep regular hours in your previous job and could sleep until midday. If you want to be fully awake, you need to train your body to keep regular "working" hours. This requires two weeks of going to sleep at a reasonable time and waking up much earlier. It's important to stick to this regime every day. A good night's sleep before your first day of work is a good idea. But it won't make up for three months of late-night partying with friends.

adapted from www.howstuffworks.com

5.1. The author explains how to

- A. find a regular job.
- B. make difficult decisions at work.
- C. get used to a new daily routine.

Tekst 2.

The headhunter promised us better-paid jobs. Some of us left but most of us stayed. We liked where we were and we didn't necessarily want to meet new people. It had taken us a while to feel comfortable here. On my first day on the job, names went in one ear and out the other. One minute you were introduced to a guy with red hair, and before you knew it you had moved on to someone new and then someone after that. A few weeks went by and one day it just clicked: the redhead's name was Jim Jackers.

adapted from Then We Came to the End by Joshua Ferris

5.2. From the text we learn

- A. why the narrator decided not to change his workplace.
- B. how the narrator helped the red-haired man.
- C. how much the narrator earned.

Tekst 3.

Dear Janette,

We're very happy that you have decided to join our sales team. It's an exciting time of the year for us, as we are moving into our busiest season, and we are counting on you to help us.

When you arrive on Monday, stop by my office and I'll introduce you to Mark and Karen who were out of town when you came here for the interview.

We're all looking forward to working with you and are certain that we'll make a good team.

Yours truly,
Margaret Davis

adapted from www.jobsearch.about.com

5.3. The letter was written to

- A. inform Janette about her duties.
- B. welcome Janette to the company.
- C. invite Janette to a job interview.

CAUGHT ON CAMERA

Lights are flashing at a crossroads in Seattle, but not because movie stars are in town. The flashes are part of a red-light camera system that takes pictures of cars crossing an intersection after the light has changed to red.

The red-light cameras have been installed in more than five hundred cities around the US. In Seattle, there are cameras at more than 30 crossroads which have a history of serious accidents and many cars running a red light, that is entering the crossroads after the light has changed to red. At these crossroads, cameras are turned on when a car runs a red light. Photographs are taken of the car from behind, showing its registration number but not the driver. A ticket for the standard amount of $124 is then sent to the driver who broke the law. The red-light cameras don't take photographs of cyclists who run red lights. Although cyclists should respect the same traffic signal regulations as motorists, there is no registration system that could identify a cyclist or a bicycle in a photograph. This might change in the future but it won't be very soon.

The Seattle Police Department has expressed satisfaction with the cameras. But many citizens oppose them. Some people believe that the cameras are not reliable, or that they have simply been installed to collect some funds for the city. Others don't like receiving a ticket through this system and say that more work should be done by the police. In some cities – but not in Seattle – the photos show not only the car and its registration number, but also the face of the driver. Citizens believe that this is even worse.

Despite the opposing arguments, the use of red-light cameras is becoming more common. A recent study has found that traffic cameras improve public safety. In Seattle, the number of cars running a red light has decreased by 50% at crossroads with cameras. And although accidents still happen, the fact that the cameras are there makes them less serious. There are also fewer accidents than before. However, other cities have reported an increase in one type of car accident at crossroads with cameras – there have been more collisions in which one car crashes into the car in front of it.

adapted from Spotlight, 2012

6.1. The new system of cameras in Seattle takes photos of

- A. cars driving too fast at dangerous crossroads.
- B. the face of a driver who doesn't slow down when the traffic lights change.
- C. the front of a car when its driver stops suddenly.
- D. the back of a car when its driver ignores a red light.

6.2. Which is TRUE about cyclists?

- A. Traffic signal regulations are different for them.
- B. A different system is used to identify them.
- C. They are not photographed when they run red lights.
- D. They must get a special registration number for their bikes.

6.3. In the 3rd paragraph we learn why

- A. the system has been criticized by the police.
- B. some cities decided to improve the system.
- C. some citizens do not approve of the system.
- D. the system in Seattle shows the face of the driver.

6.4. According to a recent study, in Seattle

- A. the number of collisions at crossroads with cameras has decreased by 50%.
- B. cars crash at crossroads with cameras more often than before.
- C. drivers have started to avoid crossroads with cameras.
- D. the accidents have become less serious at crossroads with cameras.

6.5. The author of the text

- A. explains why some cities refuse to introduce the system.
- B. expresses his negative opinion of the new system.
- C. describes the role of the police in the new system.
- D. gives some information about the new system.
