- A. Choose where to sit
- B. Check the regulations
- C. Talk to the staff on the plane
- D. Move around
- E. Take your mind off the flight
- F. Avoid airline meals
- G. Pack wisely
- H. Ask for non-standard food earlier

TIPS ON TRAVELLING BY PLANE

4.1.
------	--

Before you buy a plane ticket, find out as much as possible about the airline's procedures, for example how long before the flight you have to be at the airport, how much luggage you can take, how much it costs to change the date of your flight or what documents you must have to check in. If you don't know the rules, you might miss your flight or have to pay a lot of money.

4.2.
------	--

When getting ready for the journey, put all valuable things, like a laptop or an expensive camera in your carry-on bag. You won't have to worry about them if your checked-in luggage gets lost. It's also a good idea to take a small blanket or a pair of warm socks on the plane with you because some flights can be colder than others.

4.3.

Even if you travel in economy class, some areas of the plane are better than others. Reserve a seat by the aisle if you want more legroom, or a window seat if you want to sleep during the flight. The worst seats are near the toilets because other passengers will be moving there regularly.

4.4.

Usually all passengers are served the same meal but if you are a vegetarian or you are allergic to some products, you can ask for a special dish. Contact your airline to get one. Such meals have to be prepared in advance so you need to order them up to three days before your flight.

4.5.
------	--

When you sit for some time in the same position, you might experience a headache or back pains. Especially on long flights, it is important to take a walk up and down the aisle from time to time. At the back of the plane there might be enough room to do some back stretches.

4.6.

If you are afraid of flying, put the headphones on and listen to your favourite music. In this way you won't hear the noise of the engines and it will be easier for you to forget where you are. You can also play computer games or solve puzzles. Studies have shown that when your brain is busy with something difficult, you can't worry about other things.

4.7.

If you hear or feel something that worries you, ask the flight attendants about it. Most likely they will have a very logical explanation. For example, many people are afraid of turbulence. However, turbulence is not dangerous. It is the plane's way of coping with changing air flows.

THE KING'S HOME

In the morning I drove to Elvis Presley's birthplace – the town of Tupelo. It was early so I expected it to be closed. However, it was open and there were already some tourists inside. Others were taking photographs beside the house or waiting to enter. The house, tidy and white, stood in the shade in a park. The house was shaped like a shoebox and had just two rooms: a front room and a plain kitchen at the back. It looked comfortable and had a nice feel about it, but it didn't look like the museum of the King.

A pleasant fat lady sat in a chair and answered questions, usually the same questions about a thousand times a day, but she didn't seem to mind. Of several visitors in the museum, I was the youngest – the only one under sixty – yet old enough to remember watching Elvis live when I was a child. I wasn't sure why his fans around me were all elderly people. I thought this was because Elvis had become less popular by the end of his life. Or maybe old people are the only ones who have enough time to visit the homes of dead celebrities.

There was a visitors' book by the door in which I could see that not many foreigners had visited the house. Most of the visitors were Americans, many of them from towns I had never heard of before like Coleslaw, Indiana; Dead Squaw, Oklahoma; Frigid, Minnesota; and Colostomy, Montana. The book had an optional column for remarks. Reading down the list I saw, "Nice," "Real nice," "Very nice," "Not bad," "Nice." Such eloquence! I turned back to an earlier page. One visitor clearly hadn't understood the intention of the remarks column and had written, "Visit." Every other visitor on that page had written, "Visit," "Visit," "Re-visit," "Visit," until someone had turned the page and they got back on the right track.

Tupelo citizens remember their most famous son. Elvis Presley's house is in Elvis Presley Park on Elvis Presley Drive, just off the Elvis Presley Memorial Highway. But don't expect to see any souvenir shops or wax museums in the town. There is just a nice little house with a tiny gift shop where tourists can buy some Elvis albums, badges, plates or posters. I was glad I had stopped.

ROGER'S LESSON

Mrs. Luella Bates was a large woman with a large purse that had everything in it but a hammer and nails. It was eleven o'clock at night, and she was walking alone after a hard day's work. Suddenly, a boy ran up behind her and tried to steal her purse. The strap broke easily as the boy pulled it from behind. But the weight of the purse caused him to lose his balance so, instead of running away, the boy fell on his back, and his legs flew up. The woman turned around, reached down and picked the boy up. Holding him tightly by his shirt the woman said, "Pick up my purse, boy. Aren't you ashamed of yourself?" By that time two or three people passed, stopped, turned to look, and some stood watching. "If I set you free, will you run?" asked the woman. "Yes," said the boy. "Then I won't set you free," said the woman. "Let's have a look at you. Your face is dirty. It will get washed this evening," said the woman going up the street and dragging the frightened boy behind her.

When they finally got to her house, she dragged the boy inside. She switched on the light and left the door open. "What's your name?" she asked. "Roger," answered the boy. "Then, Roger, you go to that sink and wash your face," said the woman. She set him free at last. Roger looked at the door, looked at the woman and went to the sink. "Are you going to call the police? Will you take me to jail?" he asked. "No, with that face I would not take you anywhere," said the woman. "Here I am trying to get home to cook dinner and rest a little and you take my purse! Why did you do it? Maybe you haven't had your dinner either. Have you?" "There's nobody home," said the boy. "Then we'll eat," said the woman, "I believe you're hungry. Isn't that why you wanted to steal my purse?" "No. I just wanted a pair of blue leather shoes I saw in the shop window," said the boy. "Well, you didn't have to steal my purse to get shoes," said Mrs. Bates. "You could have asked me."

The woman was sitting on the sofa. After a while she said, "I was young once and I wanted things I could not get. I'm sure you think I want to say that I didn't steal people's purses to get them. Well, I didn't. But I have done things, too; things I'm not very proud of. So you just stay here and I will fix us something to eat. Then we will talk." Mrs. Bates got up and went to the other corner of the room. The woman did not watch the boy to see if he was going to run away. But the boy sat quietly on the far side of the room so that she could easily see him. He wanted her to trust him. She heated some lima beans and ham and set the table. The woman avoided asking the boy anything that would embarrass him. Instead, as they ate, she told him about what she did in a hotel beauty-shop that stayed open late, what the work was like, and how all kinds of women came in and out to have their hair done. When they finished eating she got up and said, "Now, here, take ten dollars and get yourself the shoes. And next time, do not make the mistake of snatching anybody's purse – because shoes got this way will burn your feet. I need to get my rest now."

She led him down the hall to the front door. "Good night! Behave yourself, boy!" she said, looking out into the street. The boy wanted to say something else to Mrs. Bates, but he couldn't do so. He barely managed to say "Thank you" before she shut the door. And he never saw her again.
