- F. A REGULATION INTRODUCED TO DEAL WITH THE PROBLEM

SILENT FIREWORKS

4.1.

New Year's Eve firework shows are amazing to watch. But while spectators enjoy the explosions of light and colour, people taking care of animals prepare for the busiest night of the year. During traditional firework shows many pets get scared and run away in panic from their owners. They often get lost and sometimes even injured. The loud bangs are a really terrifying experience for animals.

4.2.

Traditional fireworks have negative effects not only on animals but also on people. They can seriously damage people's ability to hear for a short time or, in some cases, forever. According to the World Health Organisation a safe noise level is 120 decibels. Because traditional fireworks are typically above 150 decibels, it comes as no surprise they can be particularly harmful for children, elderly people and those with sensitive hearing.

4.3.

Two years ago, the government of the Italian town of Collecchio decided to do something to limit the negative consequences of loud fireworks both for people and pets. They made a law saying that during celebrations people are only allowed to use silent fireworks. This was so effective that since then many other cities have started to use silent fireworks.

4.4.

Silent fireworks are kinder to both people and animals but are they as enjoyable? The fact is that they cannot produce rich colours, the height they can reach and the visual effects they produce are not as spectacular as in the case of traditional fireworks. Although silent fireworks can provide pretty effects at a wedding or a display for a small group celebration, they just can't replace the real thing. People still like their fireworks to explode with a loud bang.

Tekst 1.*A DAY I'LL ALWAYS REMEMBER

I was 11 years old. The football match had just ended with another victory for us and it was one of the best I had played for my team. Mum drove me there because my dad was at work. I remember coming out of the changing room and seeing Mum waiting for me. I put my bag in the car. And then I noticed she had tears in her eyes.

“Lucky you had a good game, David,” she said. “Why?” I asked. “That man over there: he's a Manchester United scout. They want you on their junior team.”

I can still remember the feeling of surprise mixed with joy.

adapted from My Side by David Beckham

5.1. David describes

- A. the match he won for Manchester United.
- B. a situation when he got unexpected news.
- C. his feelings about his dad not being at the match.

Tekst 2.*WORLD CUP TROPHY TOUR

Every football fan knows what the FIFA World Cup Trophy looks like – it's made of gold and shows two men lifting the Earth. If you want to see it up close, you'll now be able to do so. Next year the trophy is going on a tour around the world. It'll travel the globe, visiting over 90 countries. If you are interested, visit the FIFA official website for more information about cities and dates. And remember – the events are free but you need to order your ticket as soon as possible! Don't think twice, as it may be your only opportunity to see the trophy.

THEY WIN, THEY LOSE, THEY CLEAN UP

After a football match, food waste and plastic cups are usually left behind in the stadium. Usually, but not when the Japanese team play. It doesn't matter if they win or lose or what country the match is played in. When it finishes, Japanese fans start walking through the rows of seats equipped with large rubbish bags. That's the way they are brought up by parents. Even at school or kindergarten Japanese kids always clean up their classrooms after each lesson. What do Japanese fans think about the fact that their habits have become a hit on social media? Naturally, they're proud!

adapted from www.bbc.com

5.3. Why do Japanese fans clean up the stadium after a match?

- A. They learn in their childhood to keep things in order.
- B. It's a way to teach others how to recycle rubbish.
- C. They want to be famous on social media.

THE RING

One sunny morning Gary came out of the ocean and noticed that his wedding ring was missing. He thought it was either lying somewhere on the sandy beach or, perhaps, he had lost it while swimming. Although it seemed useless, Gary and his friends spent some time searching for the ring all over the beach. They had no luck and Gary gave up hope. He realized there was little chance of finding it.

The ring was not valuable. Gary wasn't a wealthy man when he got married, and he could not afford expensive things. Still, the ring had great sentimental value for him. His wife's name was on it. So was the date of their marriage, 5th June, 2003. Maria and Gary had been married for fifteen years and Gary had never lost his wedding ring until that day on the beach.

The place where Gary was spending his holiday was called Portsalon, a seaside resort in Ireland. Ann Busch and her two daughters were on holiday there too. The girls were building sandcastles with their mum watching them. The last thing they expected to find was a piece of jewellery. But they did – a wedding ring with a date and the name Maria on it. They threw it back in the sand, without looking at it carefully, and continued playing, but their mum saw it and picked it up to have a closer look. She got really interested in it and started to wonder who had lost it. Ann thought it would be impossible to find the owner, but with a name and a date on it there was always a chance. She asked local people if they knew a woman called Maria or recognized the date. But without success. Then, Ann photographed the ring and posted it on Facebook, hoping that someone would contact her. A week later her post had been shared more than 4,300 times. That was much more than she had expected. Many people contacted her, wondering if it was the ring they had lost in Portsalon. She discovered that plenty of rings had been lost there.

At first it all looked promising, but over the next few weeks Ann still could not find the owner of the ring. Then, one day a man sent her a message on Facebook and told her that after examining the picture of the ring, he was sure it belonged to his brother-in-law! After checking some details, Ann sent the ring back to its owner. She was delighted to find him and for Gary it was great to have the ring back. In his email to Ann he wrote, "It was such a nice feeling for me and my wife to go from thinking it was gone forever to seeing it again."

A REWARD FOR A SMILE

Michelle Bozeman has been working as a waitress for over 25 years. She loves her job and even at times when things get stressful, she keeps a positive attitude. 7.1. _____ That day Michelle served an elderly couple. After greeting them, she ended up chatting with them about her life, her kids and grandkids, and how she'd supported them over the years. 7.2. _____ She started cleaning up and everything seemed normal until she saw the tip the couple had left for her. The tip on the $44 meal was $10 000. She had never seen so much money! Along with the tip, they left a note: Thanks for smiling. Please do something good for yourself and other people. Enjoy. The note asked Michelle to help someone else – and she did. 7.3. _____ But she also plans to do something for herself. She is going on the trip to Ireland she has always dreamed of. This goes to show that when you're at work, it helps to keep a smile on your face.

adapted from www.theepochtimes.com

- A. Michelle obviously wanted to see the couple again and thank them.
- B. But during one shift, some customers really gave her something to smile about.
- C. She shared some of the money with her co-workers and will give some of it to charity.
- D. They explained they had left such a huge tip because they were satisfied with the service.
- E. When the customers finished their meal, they left so quickly that Michelle didn't even notice.
