Woman: Today I'm talking to Jack Steward, a young, talented basketball player. Welcome to the programme, Jack.

Jack: Hello, I'm glad to be here.

Woman: How often do you play basketball, Jack?

Jack: I play it at school from Monday to Thursday and once a week I train with a professional adult team at a sports club.

Woman: A professional team?! Tell me something more about them.

Jack: Well, we always meet on Friday afternoons at the gym and practise for about three hours. We're top of the league at the moment. I'm proud to be a player in a professional team.

Woman: Do you go to camps with them?

Jack: Last month I went to a basketball camp with my team for the first time. We practised our skills and played a lot of games.

Woman: Does your team always win?

Jack: Last week we lost for the first time this season. I was hoping we would beat the other team, but we were a bit unlucky this time.

Woman: Well, it sometimes happens. Tell me, Jack, who's your hero?

Jack: Brian Dux. He was my coach for some time, but then he had a car crash and I haven't seen him for two years.

Woman: Why do you enjoy basketball so much?

Jack: Because it's one of the most exciting sports of all! Very competitive but in a positive way.

Woman: That's why there are so many basketball fans. The game is exciting, as Jack said, fun and very fast. Thank you, Jack, and good luck with your match next Friday. We'll be back after a short break.

Hi! My name is Susan. I know that for most of you summer holidays mean fun and sunshine, but I spend some of my time off school working in the shop at my family's campsite. I'm usually there three days a week from about 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. and I serve holidaymakers. I have to get up really early, but that's fine with me. Before the shop opens, I have to do some cleaning. That definitely isn't the bright side of the job. Sometimes there's really a lot of mess near the shop and I have to deal with it. What a nightmare!

I think that working at the campsite has helped me to learn a lot, for example, if people complain, I know what to do and say. It's very useful. But what I like most about working there is getting to know people from different corners of the world. They always have some interesting stories to tell. I love it!

On my days off I go and see my friends. Sometimes they come and spend time at the campsite with me. We have a great time talking to tourists. My family's campsite becomes a lively meeting place, which is great!

When I was walking my dog, I let him off the lead as I always do. Suddenly, I couldn't see him. I looked round the field for about thirty minutes. I got really worried. Eventually, I walked home and he was sitting outside my front door! I have no idea how he managed to cross the busy road safely.

My dog, Pepper, often jumps onto the dining table in the kitchen. I don't like it. When I go out, I put her in my study. However, the problem is that she can open the door, so I have to lock her in. Yesterday, as I was going out, I was in such a great hurry that I left Pepper in the study, but didn't remember to lock the door. When I came back, she was playing on the dining table again.

One day, my dad came back home after doing the shopping and was getting some things out of the car. When he wasn't looking, our cat jumped into the car. Later on, we went to the swimming pool. When we opened the car, our cat jumped out. She was just a little frightened, but otherwise she was OK, luckily.

This isn't really about my pet, but it's quite an amazing story. When we bought our house, the lady who lived next door had a cat. Then she went to live in another city, about an hour away, and she took the cat with her. A few days after she went away I saw her cat sitting in the driveway of the house she once owned. It had walked all the way back!
